

Inclusive Calendar Guide

Introduction

The Inclusive Calendar Guide is a key initiative of the K-12 Anti-Racism Action Plan. The Action Plan was built on feedback received from the Minister’s Community Roundtable in 2020, as well as feedback collected from the Ministry of Tourism, Arts and Culture hosted community dialogues in 2019 exploring how government can build a safer, more inclusive province. The Action Plan was refined after the second Community Roundtable in 2021 that included feedback seeking a calendar that identified significant events of advocacy, celebration, or honour to bring awareness and build equity in schools.

Research has demonstrated that “In anti-racism education, inclusion is the act of creating environments in which any individual or group can feel welcomed, respected, valued and able to fully participate in the school and district by both contributing to and benefiting from its continual development” (Paucholo, 2013).

The inclusive calendar guide is provided to support school districts and/or schools to create or enhance an inclusive school calendar where everyone can see themselves identified, welcomed, and valued.

What is an Inclusive Calendar?

An inclusive calendar is a living document that has dates of significance, recognition, and celebration for all members of the school community.

An inclusive calendar should recognize dates of significance and celebrate holidays of the diverse cultures, races, places of origin, ethnicities, religions, economic statuses, gender identities, gender expressions, sexual orientations, disabilities and abilities of the local school community and greater British Columbia.

How to Create an Inclusive Calendar:

1. Gather the dates.
 - Connect with local Indigenous, IBPOC, 2SLGBTQ+, and community representatives to include local dates of significance and celebration that may not appear in Euro-centric calendars. Some days of importance are not located on specific calendar dates but rather are marked by seasonal changes or events.
 - Review established calendars for dates of significance and celebration that you may incorporate into your inclusive calendar. Calendars to review may include:
 - Governing bodies
 - Government of Canada - Important and Commemorative Days
 - Government of Canada – Health Promotion Days
 - Province of British Columbia – Proclamations

- United Nations
 - Educational Agencies
 - B.C. Teacher's Federation
 - SOGI 123
 - Simon Fraser University \(sfu.ca\)
 - Public culture calendars
 - 2022 Multicultural Calendar | Diversity Calendar | Multifaith Calendar
 - 2022 Diversity Calendar - Inclusion and Cultural Events \(diversityresources.com\)
 - The Complete Diversity & Cultural Calendar, Dates and Celebration Events
- Ensure that significant dates of social justice and anti-racism recognition are included to promote understanding and awareness even if members of those demographic are not identifiably represented in the classrooms (e.g., Pink Shirt Day).
- Include local celebrations or events that have importance to the school community.
- Place “fun” days such as “school sports day” on other calendars, so as not to take away from the importance or value of culturally significant days.
- Consider the impact of some “fun” days and their activities like “school spirit days” and “crazy hair day” as these days may reinforce exclusionary norms. Find ways to ensure days and activities are inclusive for everyone.

2. Engage the community.

- Meet with a diverse range of community members to review the proposed calendar and identify whether they see themselves represented in the calendar. Community engagements may include but is not limited to:
 - Surveys
 - Forums
 - Open Houses
 - Working Groups
 - PAC meetings
- When inviting engagement with community, ensure that a culturally safe space is awaiting them.
- Adjust the calendar based on the community feedback. Listening to and acting on community voice will create a stronger inclusive calendar for the school and/or district.
- Be prepared for possible opposition from members of the community who do not understand why there are additions to the calendar. Consider providing the school community with helpful information as updates are made to understand how all students benefit when the diverse representation of their community is a part of their school environment.

3. Share resources.

- Post the list of dates publicly in schools and/or within the school district.
- Invite community members to share their experiences and cultural practices, so that celebrations honour traditions and do not “tokenize” the dates. Tokenizing can happen when dates of significance or celebration are identified in a minimal way without honouring the meaning behind the event. An example of tokenizing would be launching Pride Season with rainbow displays in the school without discussing the historical discrimination of the LGBTQ2S+ community and celebrating the resiliency and contributions of the community.

- Include additional information about the calendar dates, such as descriptions, to assist teachers, students, and community members to learn more about the celebrations and days of recognition.
- Provide teachers and staff with appropriate resources that support the recognition and celebration of the day or event.
 - Example of a district that has created anti-racism and resource pages:
 - Kootenay Lake School District - Anti-Racism
 - Example of a district that has created celebration specific resource pages:
 - Delta School District – Black History Month
 - Examples of organizations with online resources:
 - Pink Shirt Day
 - Moose Hide Campaign
 - Down Syndrome Day
 - Black Excellence Day
 - Inclusion Resource Hub – West Vancouver Memorial Library
 - SOGI 123

4. Recognize and celebrate respectfully and authentically.

- Include community and student voice in the planning and recognition of the day or event. Event planning for days of significance should include perspectives of those with lived and living experiences but should not become their sole responsibility.
- Plan to support the possible emotional needs of those with lived and living experiences.
- Update annually.
 - Lunar calendar dates, such as those used by Jewish and Islamic communities, do not match static calendars and need to be matched to the traditional Canadian calendar on an annual basis.
 - New dates of significance may be proclaimed by governing bodies and may want to be added to the calendar.
 - School district demographics may have shifted to include new groups that do not see themselves in the calendar and therefore adjustments would want to be made.
- Note: Sometimes in sincere attempts to be inclusive, it is possible to create feelings of exclusion. It is not possible to include every special religious, spiritual, cultural or international day and therefore, important to be sensitive to those who may feel missed out. Recognize the importance of focusing on the uniqueness of the surrounding community and embedding these identities into planning and practises.
- Understand the significance of each day and event as well as the proper pronunciation. Learn supporting language and share that with the school community. Examples of glossaries of terms that may be helpful include:

- British Columbia's Office of the Human Rights Commissioner - Glossary
- Kootenay Lake School District - Terms & Vocabulary
- Delta School District - Learn the Terms

Possible Ways to Use the Calendar in your School or District:

1. School boards can:
 - Highlight key dates on board websites.
 - Create and share educator resources specific to upcoming dates.
 - Host events that showcase the different members of the school community.
2. School administrators can:
 - Set-up a bulletin board that showcases different days of celebration and significance.
 - Create school clubs or organizations of students/teachers/community to recognize different days.
 - Announce, identify, and honor days of relevance that may have specific school context based on the student population.
3. Educators can:
 - Align curricular themes or projects around dates of significance.
 - Use the calendar as a teaching tool to begin conversations or lead topics.
 - Use the calendar as a basis for art projects, theme days, or learning tasks that go beyond traditional dates celebrated in Canadian classrooms (e.g., Mother's Day).

Inclusive Calendar Example:

The example calendar is an idea of what a school calendar may look like. The colour coding and labeling were created to assist educators to locate resources. This example calendar is not provided as an extensive list of dates, nor would it be expected that all dates on this calendar be observed or celebrated, but it does contain dates of significance that schools and districts may want to consider.

Due to the sensitive subject matter shared in some dates of significance, individuals may become triggered. Please ensure you have prepared a support system that is easily accessible. This may be an Elder, trusted adult, family, friend, counsellor and/or crisis contact number.
